A FEW WORDS BEHIND THE REFLECTION ON BODY POLITICS

We need rebels and anger to break through the conditioning of our education. But breaking through the wall of confinement is nothing if we are not also true builders.

But who can give us the tools of our wisdom?

Religions have locked up many of our representations of the divine in disgust, various political regimes have destroyed hope of a functional society respectful of life, and science has given us comfort and security to the point where we no longer dare listen to life.

We also need visionaries rooted in the traditions of ancient civilizations, to establish new ways of listening attentively to the laws of life, to find harmony between all kingdoms.

Human laws are dead.

They have given us nothing.

Except imprisonment and slavery.

Innocence is immediately seized upon to serve the black snake.

A snake that leads to pride and non-evolution in the reign of the walking dead.

Without realizing it, we feed what we hate, to finally eat from its hand and become its image.

Because, lonely and without reference points, in a civilization where the sense of family and community has been weakened, and the sense of life and intelligence has been transformed into cold object, we can only turn to our real nurturing mother: the state.
