

The group is addressing a topic - how to translate a specific diagram into live action. Two suggestions emerge from the group for activities that might meet the group's needs. The group discusses and decides to try both. When trying one of the suggested activities, individuals modify its rules to bring progress for the whole group within the topic being addressed. During the activity, the group agrees that it is appropriate to continue developing it, so the second suggested activity is not used in the end.
